Can I get a receipt? The elastic and trendy new currency is gaining acceptance in Philly and can now pay for beer and wings.

Bartender Samantha Clements learns how to use a bitcoin-enabled tablet at Cavanaugh's. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER, METRO

Bitcoins, the cryptocurrency that's taking off around the globe, is arriving right here in Philadelphia. Starting Wednesday, Cavanaugh's on Sansom Street in Rittenhouse is accepting bitcoins as payment.

Currently, Cavanaugh's is a Center City sports bar that is known for its 45-cents-per-wing special on Thursday nights.

Owner Ken Hutchings joked that now they might start to offer 0.0001-bitcoin wings.

That's because bitcoins, once having the value of mere pennies, are now valued at more than $800 each — $813.21 exactly, as of Jan. 23.

That's a lot more than the cost of wings and a couple beers. But it's possible to just pay with a fraction of a bitcoin.

When Cavanaugh's customers pay with Bitcoin, all they need is a droid-based smartphone with the free Coinbase app and an account.

When the check comes, instead of whipping out your credit card or cash, it's just a quick digital Bitcoin transaction.

Cryptic

What the heck is a bitcoin?

Bitcoins were developed in 2009 by an anonymous developer(s). Bitcoins were first popularized as a currency for illegal drug sales on the deep Internet "Silk Road" website, but now they are used for many legitimate purposes.

Recently, Overstock.com and OKCupid.com started accepting them as a form of payment. It's also being investigated by Amazon and eBay as a payment option.

Retailers accepting cryptocoins can either hold onto the coins or transfer them to U.S. currency. Other cryptocoins such as Litecoin and Dogecoin also have active followings and dedicated users.

Quoted

"In 2020, they could be worth nothing, or they could be worth a million dollars. I'm willing to take that risk and see how it goes." Hutchings

"I was interested personally in it from the beginning," Hutchings said of Bitcoin. "I did my research five months ago; I thought, 'This is just neat.'"

There are some advantages to accepting bitcoins over other forms of payment, Hutchings said.

"One of the main reasons we were looking at them was with Coinbase, before you get $1 million in sales, you're not getting [charged] points," he explained. "Credit card charges are 3 percent for Visa and MasterCard."

On Thursday, Cavanaugh's was still waiting for its first bitcoin-toting customer to walk through the door, but it could end up being a landslide as the cryptocurrency is increasing in popularity.

"People earn them through transaction formulas they can process," Hutchings said of Bitcoin mining. "I don't have any regulars that have earned them that way, but maybe it will attract a new group of people."

Expansion. SEPTA to start spending new state funding on lot

SEPTA announced this week its first project using money from the recently approved transportation funding bill.

Alongside Gov. Tom Corbett, SEPTA officials unveiled plans to expand the parking lot at Secane Regional Rail station, which services the Media/Elwyn Regional Rail Line.

According to a news release, the work will focus on critical infrastructure needs and the replacement of aging equipment.

SEPTA said its Media/Elwyn Regional Rail Line, which serves Secane Station, "has some of SEPTA's most pressing needs." METRO

Snowy owl returns to PHL

A snowy owl was recently found at Philadelphia International Airport and brought to a bird sanctuary in Lancaster County.

Amber Long's murderer caught on tape

Still at large. Two suspects police thought to be the attackers were falsely accused.

The reward to catch Amber Long's killer is now at $30,000.

The Fraternal Order of Police added $10,000 on top of the city's $20,000 offer in hopes of enticing anyone with information to come forward.

Long, 26, was killed in front of her 50-year-old mother during a robbery attempt the night of Jan. 19 in Northern Liberties.

Capt. James Clark released video on Thursday that shows the attackers' suspected getaway car — a newer model, four-door, possible Chevy Impala — circling the block and allegedly looking for victims before the attack. Clark said the mother and daughter walked by the vehicle at one point, and a short time later they were attacked.

Long, of the 1700 block of West Ritner Street, got off the El with her mother and the two were walking toward their parked car when they were attacked on the 900 block of Front Street. One man snatched the mother's purse from her shoulder and ran.

The second attacker attempted to take Long's purse, and after he spun her around by the purse, he shot her. The purse dropped was left behind.

Initial reports indicated Long struggled with the attacker before her purse was stolen. Clark said there was no struggle.

"These individuals are out-and-out cowards," Clark said.

RCO. Community groups to re-register every two years

Registered Community Organizations will now have to re-register every two years.

City Council on Thursday approved this change to the zoning code, as well as requirements for RCOs to meet regularly and a provision that forces developers to notify the groups of pending projects that would require zoning changes.

Councilman Bobby Henon, who introduced the changes in the fall, said it would take the burden off of a lot of community organizations and would hold the developer to much more accountability.

Henon said it would allow registered RCOs to "have more of a voice, more of a say," in their neighborhoods.

Protestors at Thursday's meeting said the bill sides with developers and attempts to silence community members.

As registered groups, members can offer feedback on decisions and can meet with developers.

Henon refuted that claim, and said the change clears up the notifications to the groups by the developer and makes the role of the RCO clearer. "It's just a muddy process," he said.

Councilman: Treat e-cigs like real cigs

Philadelphia City Councilman-at-Large Bill Green on Thursday introduced legislation that would hold electronic cigarettes to the same restrictions as regular cigarettes.

Citing an "alarming" increase in the number of young people who are using e-cigarettes, Green said an "important outcome of this legislation is the affirmation of a tobacco-free lifestyle."

The legislation, co-sponsored with Councilman-at-Large Bill Greenlee, would move to regulate e-cigarettes under the city's "Clear Indoor Air Worker Protection Law" and would define the use as "smoking" and prohibit its use in certain areas.

Report: NSA telephone data collection is illegal

The board. Their review was based in part on classified briefings and documents.

Legal ground

The board's conclusion that NSA's bulk collection of Americans telephone metadata lacks legal grounding goes further than those of both the president and an ad hoc committee he created to review NSA eavesdropping activities.

The Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board was established at the recommendation of the 9/11 Commission in 2004. / GETTY IMAGES

The U.S. National Security Agency's bulk collection of phone records provides only minimal benefits to countering terrorism, is illegal and should end, a federal privacy watchdog said in a report released on Thursday and reviewed by Reuters.

The watchdog agency's report could further complicate efforts by both President Barack Obama and Congress to come up with possible reforms to NSA eavesdropping

The Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board, which produced the new report, is an independent government agency within the executive branch that advises the President and Congress on how to ensure that counterterrorism operations also protect Americans' privacy.

In its report, the board called on the government to end the NSA program that collects U.S. telephone records in bulk and to purge the data it had collected, adding ammunition to efforts by privacy advocates to win new restrictions on government surveillance programs.

"The Section 215 bulk telephone records program lacks a viable legal foundation under Section 215, implicates constitutional concerns under the First and Fourth Amendments, raises serious threats to privacy and civil liberties as a policy matter, and has shown only limited value," the board said in its report.

In its report released last month, the review panel also raised questions about the value of telephone metadata collection in producing counter terrorism breakthroughs. The panel recommended that metadata collection should continue, but that data should henceforth be stored either by telephone companies or an independent third party. REUTERS

In a jam. Prosecutors subpoena documents in NJ bridge scandal

The U.S. Attorney's Office in New Jersey has issued subpoenas to Gov. Chris Christie's campaign and the state Republican Party for documents related to George Washington Bridge lane closures, a lawyer for both groups said Thursday.

Federal prosecutors are looking into the incident in September when top Christie aides are believed to have orchestrated huge traffic jams, apparently to settle a political score during the governor's re-election campaign.

The governor, who is widely seen as a top Republican contender for the White House in 2016, has said he had no direct knowledge of the incident, which is also under investigation by a state legislative committee. REUTERS

Card scam. Target CFO to testify before Senate on data breach

Target Corp.'s chief financial officer will testify before the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee on Feb. 4 about a massive data breach in what is likely to be the first time the retailer publicly answers questions about the unprecedented attack.

The committee is chaired by Sen. Patrick Leahy, a Vermont Democrat and author of one of the few data security bills under consideration.

John Mulligan, who is executive vice president as well as chief financial officer, oversees Target's financial portfolio, including finance and retail services, company spokeswoman Molly Snyder said in an email.

Representatives of the Federal Trade Commission, the Secret Service and the Department of Justice are also slated to testify at the hearing, according to the committee's schedule.

Last week, Democratic lawmakers called for a congressional inquiry into the hacking of credit and debit card data of tens of millions of customers of the No. 3 U.S. retailer during holiday shopping.

Privately owned luxury retail chain Neiman Marcus has said it too was victim of a cyber attack. REUTERS

Target has said a breach of its networks resulted in the theft of about 40 million credit and debit card records and 70 million other records with customer information. / GETTY IMAGES

MUSKRAT LOVE LIVES ON

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

FOREMAN IS A POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN.

CNN=POLITICS

Of all the news rumbling down the pike this week, I hated most hearing that Muskrat Susie and Muskrat Sam are no longer doing the jitterbug. Love kept them together for 39 years, but now Captain and Tennille will no longer be belting out their hits together, cuddling for the crowd or pretending to be part of some obscure navy. To be honest, all of that stage stuff ended years ago, and they're both in their 70s. Still, I hated to hear about their split.

About 2.1 million marriages are formed in the United States annually, according to the Centers for Disease Control. (Insert your joke here about why that agency would be tracking such matters.) People like to claim "50 percent of marriages end in divorce" and while that is a misinterpretation of the math, it is fair to say we act less committed to the institution than we were, oh say, back in the 1950s.

Quoted

Marriage is undeniably used at times to force women into roles that not all women like. Certainly some marriages, kept together out of sheer dogma, have thrust both adults and children into years of hellish unhappiness.

Perhaps with reason. Marriage is undeniably used at times to force women into roles that not all women like. Certainly some marriages, kept together out of sheer dogma, have thrust both adults and children into years of hellish unhappiness. And maybe, as some argue, in our age of increased mobility and longevity the idea of spending a lifetime with just one other person is antiquated.

But a strong marriage can also make for a strong personal economy. One of the chief reasons people sink into poverty is that they are trying to raise a child alone, and that is a hard, expensive job. Having a committed partner can help. I suspect that is also a reason some researchers have found married people live longer and healthier lives.

There is nothing wrong with remaining single, and I'm not favoring one type of marriage over another. Furthermore, I readily admit that most marriages have flaws. I'm just saying marriage, as difficult as it is and as old-fashioned as this may sound, also provides millions of Americans with stability, warmth and reliable jitterbug partners. Not a bad thing, especially when times are hard in Muskrat Land.

Texas man to ask court to remove pregnant wife from life support

A Texas paramedic will ask a Fort Worth court on Friday to remove his pregnant wife from life support, saying the fetus she is forced to carry under state law has become severely damaged in her debilitated body.

Marlise Munoz, now about 22 weeks pregnant, has been on life support in a hospital in Fort Worth since Nov. 26 after suffering what her husband, Erick, believes was a pulmonary embolism.

Attorneys for Erick Munoz will ask a Tarrant County court to grant permission to turn off life support, arguing Marlise had become nothing more than a brain-dead body.

"Marlise Munoz's death is a horrible and tragic circumstance, but by no means should [the hospital] be entitled to continue cutting into her deceased body in front of her husband and family under the guise of 'life sustaining' treatment," according to court papers they filed. REUTERS

Pope. Slow down and try a little tenderness: Francis to digital world

The often superficial high-speed world of digital social media needs an injection of calm, reflection and tenderness if it is to be "a network not of wires but of people," Pope Francis said on Thursday.

Francis, in his message for the Roman Catholic Church's World Communications Day, also said that while Catholics should cherish and defend their ideas and traditions, they should never be so smug as to claim that "they alone are valid or absolute."

He again denounced the "scandalous gap" between the rich and poor, saying it was not uncommon to see the homeless sleeping on a street in the glow of opulent store window lights.

Francis said the media and the Internet, which he called "something truly good, a gift from God," could help bring people together, but that digital communications often impeded them from truly getting to know each other.

"The speed with which information is communicated exceeds our capacity for reflection and judgment, and this does not make for more balanced and proper forms of self-expression," he said in the 1,200-word message. Modern media can help "either to expand our knowledge or to lose our bearings."

He challenged people to be more "neighborly" in the digital environment by not just tolerating others but also listening and trying to understand their points of view. REUTERS

Massachusetts senator calls for probe into Herbalife, shares drop

Watch. The SEC has routinely reviewed Herbalife's public disclosures and requested additional information.

Latino civil rights activists have also asked prosecutors in California and Illinois to probe the company's marketing practices. / GETTY IMAGES

Massachusetts Sen. Edward Markey is asking for information about the business practices of Herbalife Ltd., his office said on Thursday, making him the most prominent lawmaker to call for a probe into the nutrition company that billionaire investor William Ackman claims is a pyramid scheme.

"There is nothing nutritional about possible pyramid schemes that promise financial benefit but result in economic ruin for vulnerable families," Markey, a member of the Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee, said in a press release. He said the call for a probe followed "serious complaints of improper pressure and financial hardship" from constituents.

Herbalife spokeswoman Barbara Henderson said the company had received the letter and looks "forward to an opportunity to introduce the company to him and address his concerns at his earliest convenience."

It was the second big hit to Herbalife's stock so far this year. Last week, shares tumbled 10 percent on the heels of a regulatory probe in China into skin care products maker Nu Skin, which has a similar business model to Herbalife.

The battle for the future of Herbalife has been raging for more than a year after prominent activist investor Ackman accused the company of running a pyramid scheme — an unsustainable business model that focuses more on recruiting salespeople than on selling to outside customers. Herbalife has vehemently denied the accusations. REUTERS

Herbalife shares tumbled more than 14 percent after Markey, a Democrat, said he had written to the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Trade Commission and to Herbalife itself to try to obtain more information.

Ackman backed his accusation with a $1 billion short bet that the company's share price would drop to zero under regulatory scrutiny, and began approaching lawmakers and regulators with his evidence.

AOL to acquire Gravity for $83M

AOL Inc. has agreed to buy Gravity, a company that tailors content according to the reader's interest, for $83 million, a move to help better target advertising the company said.

AOL, which is already part of Gravity's network, said it will use its technology across its own properties like TechCrunch and the Huffington Post as well as AOL's publisher network of more than 2,000 partners.

"Our theory is the web is going from search to social to personal," said AOL CEO Tim Armstrong. REUTERS

India. Woman says gang-raped on orders of village court elders

A 20-year-old woman in eastern India was gang-raped by 13 men on the orders of a village court as punishment for having a relationship with a man from a different community, a senior police officer said on Thursday.

The woman, who is now recovering in a hospital, told police she was assaulted by the men on the night of Jan. 20 in Birbhum district in West Bengal.

Police said that her male companion was tied up in the village square, while the assault on the woman happened in a mud house.

"We arrested all the 13 men, including the village chief who ordered the gang rape. The accused have been produced in court which remanded them to jail custody," Birbhum's Superintendent of Police, C. Sudhakar, said.

India toughened laws on sex crimes in March last year following the fatal gang rape of a physiotherapist on a bus in Delhi in December. REUTERS

By the numbers

25K

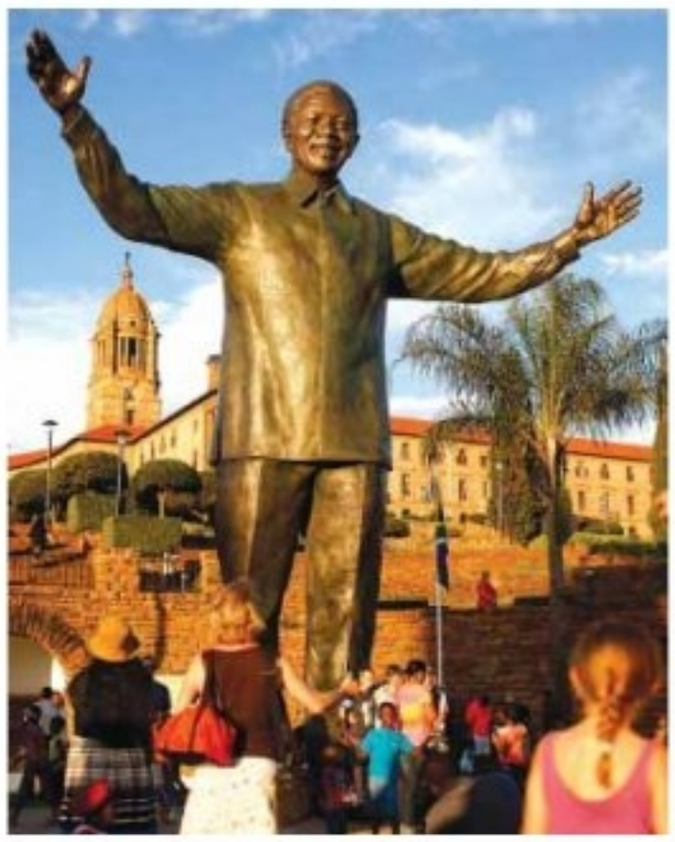
The couple was ordered to pay a fine of 25,000 rupees ($400), said the victim's mother, adding that the village head then ordered the rape of her daughter.

30K

West Bengal recorded the highest number of gender crimes in the country at 30,942 in 2012.

12.7%

That represents 12.7 percent of India's total recorded crimes against women. These crimes include rape, kidnapping and sexual harassment and molestation.



Hopping mad: Hare found in Mandela's ear

South Africa's government is up in arms over a bronze rabbit crafted inside the ear of a large statue of Nelson Mandela unveiled last month. The government said it wanted the creature removed to "restore integrity" to the 30-foot bronze sculpture. Artists Ruhan Janse van Vuuren and Andre Prinsloo say they added the animal, its ears erect, as a personal stamp after the government stopped them from engraving signatures, and as a nod to the tight deadline they faced. The Afrikaans word for rabbit, "haas," also means haste. REUTERS / GETTY IMAGES

Poor sense of humor

UK expat infuriates Singapore with 'poor people' gaffes

A British wealth manager in Singapore is facing death threats, government criticism and public anger after his social media posts about mixing with "poor people" on public transportation and being reunited with his Porsche went viral.

Anton Casey has been forced to hire a public relations firm in a bid to fend off the growing outrage over his Facebook posts.

"Ahhhhhhhhh reunited with my baby," said the caption of a photo he posted on Sunday, in which his son sits inside his sports car. "Normal service can resume, once I have washed the stench of public transport off me!"

Those posts went viral in the city-state, where an influx of wealthy foreigners has fueled growing public discontent among a population beset by rising costs in one of the most expensive cities.

Casey, who is married to the 2003 Miss Singapore, has since deleted his posts and apologized after he received thousands of online complaints from Singaporeans and said he has received death threats.

The incident has also sparked some more humorous responses.

Local bar Tuckshop has dedicated a special happy hour for Casey, offering him a special S$120 ($93.83) rate for a pint of beer, and S$12 for "the rest of us poor Singaporeans." REUTERS

The host

LL Cool J

LL Cool J is back for his third consecutive year as the host and, if previous years are any indication, he will also swing wildly between cringe-worthy (actually saying the word "hashtag" in front of everybody's name he mentions like a verbal tweet) and awe-inspiring (kicking it old-school at the end of last year's ceremony with Chuck D, Z-Trip, Tom Morello and Travis Barker). Also, if you're looking for a Grammys drinking game, if you take a drink after every time the host licks his lips, you'll be wasted before a single noteworthy award is given.

The Grammys: Lip-licking good

Music's biggest night. Here is what to be on the lookout for when tuning in on Sunday.

What makes the Grammys are the performances. The programmers know this, which is why in recent years they have featured less trophy presentations and more oddball pairings of performers that you wouldn't necessarily think would work together. The results often vary from stunning to excruciating, which is why we tune in. Here's what to look for on Sunday night.

Getting lucky?

Pharrell Williams had his hand in two of 2013's mega hits, Robin Thicke's "Blurred Lines" and Daft Punk's "Get Lucky," the latter of which he'll perform with everybody's favorite helmeted Frenchmen. With Nile Rodgers and Stevie Wonder also joining in this jam, you can feel it all over, especially as it's rumored they'll go into Wonder's classic "Sir Duke." It will also be surprising if you don't see Williams at the podium to accept an award at least once. He's nominated for seven!

Blurred horn lines

You remember Robin Thicke from the VMAs? He was the one guy that Miley Cyrus grinded upon who wasn't dressed like a stuffed animal. Anyway, he's being given another shot at awards-show glory, and he's sharing the stage with the legendary horn outfit Chicago. So he had something different in mind when he told Cyrus right before their duet that he wanted "something horny"?

'Radioactive' duet

One of the worst moments in Grammy history happened in 2006, when Linkin Park, Jay Z and Paul McCartney tried to create mashups featuring their music. (In 2006, mashups were still new and musicians were still figuring out how to accompany rappers.) Now, hip-hop and rock fit more naturally, so when Imagine Dragons play their Record of the Year nomination, "Radioactive," as Kendrick Lamar raps over it with "Swimming Pool," from his Album of the Year nomination, "Good Kid, M.A.A.D City," it has potential. Interestingly enough, Macklemore and Ryan Lewis (nominated for seven awards, including Album of the Year and Song of the Year) are not paired with anybody.

Music's last couple

Wouldn't it be sublime if hip-hop's royal couple silently acted out a dramatic scene while Lorde performed her multi-nominated "Royals"? Think about how much that "you can call me Queen Bey" part would resonate! Or maybe Jay Z and Beyonce could do "Love Will Keep Us Together," as a tribute to Captain and Tennille, who announced earlier this week they are divorcing.

Big, sloppy end

There's no star in an all-star jam, but Dave Grohl is curating the finale, which includes Nine Inch Nails, Queens of the Stone Age and Lindsey Buckingham of Fleetwood Mac. What makes this different from any Rock and Roll Hall of Fame jam is that we can't think of a single song all of these guys would like. It will be a mess, but at least it will be a fun mess.

Prime time

Would you want to make the movie you described in your "Star Wars" filibuster from "Parks and Rec?"
Jeez, if I had the time and money and resources, and was able to call on the people that I needed to do that, of course I would. If I was some insane billionaire, sure I would.

You could start a Kickstarter...
"I need $5 billion..."

How long did it take to get that scene down?
It was one take. That whole scene, you saw it all, it was all off the top of my head.

Is that how your mind usually works?
No, it was racing, because I really love "Parks and Rec" and really didn't want to do a bad job. They told me I only had to speak for 30 seconds, but they never yelled cut, to mess with me. ... That's pure terror that you are looking at.

Patton Oswalt makes comedy out of tragedy (and other things)

See more at www.metro.us

Story rants. The comic's one-hour Epix stand-up special may or may not include a Judy Blume recitation and a fog machine.

When Epix dropped the ball on airing Patton Oswalt's new one-hour comedy special, "Patton Oswalt: Tragedy Plus Comedy Equals Time," on its scheduled premiere, Jan. 16 (they ended up airing it the following night), he went on a very Patton Oswalt-esque Twitter rant. First tweeting, "Uh, yeah... sorry guys. @EpixHD f—ed up. My special airs TOMORROW night, 10pm EST. NOT tonight. Watch @parksandrecnbc instead." (Oswalt is a big fan of "Parks and Recreation.")

Being the stand-up (get it?) guy he is, however, Oswalt didn't want to let down the fans. He went on to tweet a "version" of the special — recorded last July at Spreckels Theatre in San Diego — that included a full recitation of the third chapter of Judy Blume's "Wifey" and an impression of Rhea Perlman "doing Jules' speech from the end of 'Pulp Fiction' with a fog machine." (Note: Neither of those things are in the actual special. We sort of wish they were.) We caught up with Oswalt to talk about his stint on "Parks and Recreation," his deep nerdiness, embracing a bad stand-up experience and more.

Can you recall a moment from your early days when you totally bombed?
I have so many moments where I've bombed that they've kind of blended into this giant amorphous non-memory. But what I remember even more than the bombing is the day after the bombing, where you wake up and the world didn't end. Once you embrace that, you're free.

Watch the new special "Patton Oswalt: Tragedy Plus Comedy Equals Time" at www.epixhd.com. / GETTY IMAGES

How long would you say it took you to embrace that?
Oh God, like, six, seven years. My ego held onto thinking that it was the center of the universe way longer than it should have.

I told a friend I was going to talk to you, who's a fan. He described your style of stand-up as "story ranting." Thoughts?
Story ranting. Wow. That's a very good description of what I do. Tell your friend thank you. I might actually use that. I'm serious.

You tend to play really nerdy characters — what's the nerdiest thing that you're willing to admit about yourself?
I can recite movies like "Jaws" and "Blade Runner" from beginning to end. Literally recite them. That's a level of nerdiness that other nerds look down on.

The future

What other challenges are you looking for?
I just love to be in a room and fight out the issues with two people: a husband and a wife or a son and a daughter, whatever it is. I like the human aspects of drama, so I like doing small movies, too. I think that's probably where I'll go in the near future.

And what about the follow-up to "Olympus Has Fallen"?
I've heard of it, I've sort of heard the plotline. You know probably as much as I do about that. I don't think it's as real as everybody thinks, but they are trying to get it done.

AARON ECKHART

The actor talks about finding the humanity in a horrible creature for "I, Frankenstein."

HE, MONSTER

Aaron Eckhart put himself through the wringer, both mentally and physically, to take on the titular monster in "I, Frankenstein." Stuart Beattie reimagines Mary Shelley's creation as a lone wanderer caught in the middle of an ancient war between gargoyles and demons. Sometimes, Eckhart learned, preparing for a role means getting knocked out a whole bunch of times.

What's your way into the head of this character?
Well, you have to go back to the original source, and when I reread Mary Shelley's "Frankenstein," I was reacquainted with this sensitive creature who all he wanted to do was fit in and be loved and know that he had a place in society. And I just thought, wow, so many people feel this way in life already. I felt like that as a teenager.

You're in very intimidating shape here.
I had to be. I figured if you have to take off your shirt in this movie, you better get in good shape. And it's reflective of his mental state as well. He's a survivalist, he's had to live on the periphery and eat when he can.

Was this the most physical role you've done in a while?
Oh yeah, for sure. It was just very exhausting and very difficult, and learning the stick-fighting — I did six months of training and getting in shape, being thrown around. Stuart wanted me to do all my own stunts and all the fighting myself so the audience can see my face and the sticks flying at the same time.

How many times did you accidentally hit yourself?
Many. I hit people and people hit me. It's terrible, hitting another person. Sticks are damaging, they come with such force. You know, you could easily break a nose or a cheek or knee or elbow, knuckle — something like that. I was knocked out a couple times. But it makes a good effect for the movie, especially in 3-D.

It's alive! Again and again!

Victor Frankenstein only brought his creature to life once, but movies have resurrected it repeatedly — and often. Each version is a kind of beast itself, a desecration of Mary Shelley's 1918 original. Now comes "I, Frankenstein," which was deemed too horrific to screen for critics. Here are some other monsters made out of the monster. MATT PRIGGE

'Frankenstein Conquers the World' (1965)

Japanese creature films even got in on the act. Here, the heart of Frankenstein's monster is kidnapped and accidentally exposed to the Hiroshima bombing, where it not only grows exponentially in size but also sprouts body parts. Eventually this colossus dukes it out with a giant lizard, who's sadly not Godzilla.

'Frankenstein: The True Story' (1971)

It was never a true story, but this two-part TV miniseries pretends like it almost could have happened. As conceived by author Christopher Isherwood ("I Am a Camera") and his lover Don Bachardy, the monster (Michael Sarrazin) starts off as a beautiful, unblemished man and only grows hideous as he starts to decompose.

'The Bride' (1985)

There was a not very long period where Sting tried to be one of the few pop stars to not get buried by the movies. Here he's Baron "Charles" Frankenstein, and the film begins where "Bride of Frankenstein" ends: with a gnarly monster (Clancy Brown) rejected by the mate created for him. But the mate is actually hot Jennifer Beals, whom Frankenstein decides to make his own.

'Frankenstein Unbound' (1990)

Producer Roger Corman claims to have never lost a buck. But he made enough to cover "Frankenstein Unbound," a for-him semi-pricey 1990 failed comeback that took a tortured meta approach. Here, a futuristic scientist (John Hurt) is sucked back to 1817, where he meets both Mary Shelley (Bridget Fonda) and her monster (Nick Brimble). There are also lasers.

Berenice Bejo plays a woman caught in a massive headache in "The Past." / SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

Review

'The Past'

Director: Asghar Farhadi

Stars: Berenice Bejo, Ali Mosaffa

Rating: PG-13

Strangely, the modern world is short on classical-style dramatists who churn out works with the breadth and depth of a Henrik Ibsen or an Anton Chekhov. The closest we have is Iranian filmmaker Asghar Farhadi. His film "A Separation," in which all-too-human mistakes lead to a series of troubling misunderstandings, should become a fixture of school curriculums. "The Past," his follow-up, probably won't end up on the syllabi, which is not to say it's a letdown. It's a knottier piece, less satisfying and a little harder to sift through, even as if it's ultimately as gutting.

Like "A Separation," it starts with a divorce. Ahmad (Ali Mosaffa) arrives from Iran to finish the paperwork with Marie (Berenice Bejo), his Parisian wife, from whom he parted four years prior. He arrives just in time to largely observe some major theatrics. Marie's new boyfriend, Samir (Tahar Rahim, the star of "A Prophet"), is married, but his wife has been in a coma for months, following a mysterious suicide attempt. The details of this event slowly trickle out, exacerbating a situation that's left them and their kids unhappy.

Much of the action in "The Past" takes place — as the slightly precious title hints at — in the past. The lack of in-the-moment agency makes the drama both compelling and slightly infuriating, especially as the backstory keeps getting fitted with new and crazier twists. The film lacks the grace and elegance of "A Separation," which was a lot more confident at juggling its multiple balls.

That's not a bad thing, mind. "The Past" just lacks the instant satisfaction of its predecessor, requiring more work from the viewer to enjoy it. It's still very enjoyable moment to moment. Farhadi isn't a writer who forgets visuals, though they can be a touch forceful; the opening uses the thick glass at an airport terminal to literally separate Ahmad and Marie, making bluntly clear the emotional distance between them. But he's a whiz at shooting in cramped apartments, where tiny rooms create both claustrophobia and little comfort zones for each character to retreat to when the burden of interaction becomes too much. But despite its performances and thoughtful camerawork, "The Past" is more enriching to piece together in your head after than it is while in front of you.

Gallery. Curator was inspired by her past life in the '70s punk scene

If a gallery were to show a collection of music paraphernalia in the form of posters, flyers, patches and buttons, the 1970s punk scene would offer plenty of artifacts. If the gallery wanted to include post-punk and New Wave artwork too, well, they might need a bigger venue.

Thankfully, the Galleries at Moore, on the Parkway at the all-women Moore College of Art & Design, is a large enough space to take on the task.

Opening tonight at Moore is "Pretty Vacant: The Graphic Language of Punk," a collection that includes famous images, like artist Linder Sterling's cover design of the Buzzcocks' single "Orgasm Addict" and the safety-pinned Union Jack designs of Jamie Reid that are ubiquitous with the Sex Pistols.

The show will also highlight lesser-known artists and plenty of anonymous creators of 'zines and flyers.

Curator and director of the Galleries at Moore, Kaytie Johnson, looked no further than her own life for the show's inspiration. The idea for the show came when Johnson was rifling through a box of old belongings and came across a few buttons and flyers. "I was part of the punk scene in the '70s, so as a curator, this is the most personal show I've been involved with. I had to do very little research," she says with a laugh.

Instead, she reached out to private collector Andrew Krivine.

Krivine, who lives in New York, lent hundreds of items from his personal stash of graphic punk memorabilia for the exhibit.

"Everything is from his collection," explains Johnson. "I made the choices of what to put in the show because I had a curatorial framework in mind. I made several trips to New York, but it was a real pleasure. [Krivine] has thousands of pieces to look through, so it was very nostalgic for me."

JULIA WEST

Blood "Brothers."

Coming out of a fog, singer Damien Jurado ended up finding something "Eternal."

In his 17-year career of delivering tender transmissions of the heavy-hearted, Damien Jurado has become known as one of the great somber songsmiths of his generation.

Recently, however, Jurado has changed his tune. After a life-changing dream about a man who disappears, never to return, Jurado's sound and vision have evolved into a beautiful two-part psychedelic and cinematic soundtrack to his own soul-searching. On "Brothers and Sisters of the Eternal Son," released this week, Jurado returned to the studio with singer/songwriter and producer Richard Swift for a proper sequel to 2012's "Maraqopa," the album that first references that dream.

"After I made 'Saint Bartlett,' [in 2010] my life just went to hell in a handbasket," Jurado confesses. "I wasn't leaving the house. I got mentally sick. I had a few nervous breakdowns. It was a really bad scene, man. And then I had this dream and my life sort of changed after that. Sometimes change just takes a long time. It's not always a beautiful process. Sometimes it's ugly, and for me it was really, really ugly. Now that I'm on the other end of it, it's great. I'm living in complete happiness and total freedom. My life is full of color and joy. I think, if anything, the new album really reflects that."

With a sound both ethereal and triumphant, "Brothers and Sisters" is as

Singer/songwriter Damien Jurado says he and collaborator Richard Swift have "completed the circle." / REDFERNS VIA GETTY IMAGES

Solo guy

Revelation at last

Jurado live is just a guy with a guitar, which he is OK with, but this wasn't always so: "I grew up going to see Iron Maiden. ... When I go to a show I wanna see s— blown up onstage! ... Some people just want to see a guy with a guitar and listen to his stories in song. And frankly that's what I do. And I came to this realization the other night."

dark as it is dreamy. Lush and layered vocals culminate in falsettos that seem to soar to the heavens as the patter of drums and celestial shimmer of keys lead to a newfound towering sound. With his lyrics masked in metaphor and laden with religious allusions, Jurado is no longer carrying the emotional weight of his characters, but helping them find transcendence. This is no longer a trip through the terrain of traditional Americana, but instead a path toward salvation.

"I've completed the circle now," says Jurado. "Up until now I made records that I thought would please critics. That's a very hard thing to admit. I'm not a conformist by any means and I really hate bulls—. I was trying to please fans that wanted songs like 'Ohio' and 'Sheets.' I think those are great, solid songs, and I'm glad that people like those songs, but those songs aren't me. Richard called me out on it. Meeting him was the best thing that could have ever happened to me. It reminds me of a perfect marriage. You are bringing out the most creative and unique things in your partner and they are doing the same things to you. That's how Richard and I are. He made me throw down my guitar and say, 'Screw this; I'm going to be exactly what I was created to be but spent years denying.' And to me it makes perfect sense."

So what next?

"There won't be another part of the story," notes Jurado. "This is it. There is no end to this story. I don't know how this ends. It's one of the many downfalls of waking up from a dream. It's a bummer, but I can't do anything about it."

The Bacon Brothers bring it back home

Kevin and Michael Bacon will host the Academy of Music Gala on Jan. 25. Tickets are $200-$250 at www.ticketphiladelphia.org. / PROVIDED

Concert. Kevin and Michael will host the Academy of Music's 157th anniversary party.

Kevin and Michael Bacon are coming home this weekend to host the Academy of Music 157th Anniversary Concert and Ball. The brothers will emcee the event, which features singer Jill Scott performing with Yannick Nezet-Seguin and the Philadelphia Orchestra, and keyboardists Robert Glasper and Stewart Goodyear. After the gala, the Bacon Brothers will perform a set at the Ballroom at Hyatt at The Bellevue. Born nine years apart, the brothers — actor Kevin and film/TV composer Michael — grew up in Center City, making the Academy a familiar landmark.

Do you have memories of the Academy of Music?
Michael Bacon: Our parents really valued creativity and encouraged music lessons, art lessons, dance lessons, acting lessons — anything you can think of. Since I leaned towards music, my mother would take me to the Academy all the time. The Academy Ball was a big part of our parents' social life, so it's really nice to get back to that.
Kevin Bacon: I have a very strong memory of seeing Ravi Shankar play at the Academy in the '60s, when he was having his big rock 'n' roll crossover success. I didn't play classical music, so I didn't have the direct connection to it that my brother does, and I don't know that my mother ever took me there. But then, she always liked Michael best. [Laughs]

Is performing as the Bacon Brothers a different kind of creative outlet for both of you?
MB: It's what I was always doing, but I think for Kevin it was like jumping off a cliff. I don't think either of us ever expected it to go on as long as it has and grow and change.
KB: One thing about being an actor is that you're so often putting yourself in someone else's hands. The nice thing about the band is that we have complete control. It's riskier and in some ways harder, but challenges are really what being a creative person is about.

Is it important for you to appear at events like this that support the arts?
MB: Institutions like the Philadelphia Orchestra need to survive. I'll do anything I can to help an arts organization stay in the game, because we would miss institutions like this if they disappeared, and they're definitely threatened.
KB: I agree with Mike. Art is our bread and butter. The arts are what keep us sane in a lot of ways, and they've been very good to us.

Siblings

What's special about playing music with your brother?
MB: I think there's a connection that people who aren't brothers don't have. You're going to be together for the rest of your lives, so that makes a connection of trust and a similar aesthetic. Even though we're very different people and musicians, we still have a core common ground that's always there.
KB: We have similar musical tastes, but there's enough creative tension that there's an organic fluctuation in the way that we approach music. Michael talks about his connection to the Academy being so strong because he was a classical musician since he was a little boy, and all I listened to was AM radio. You can hear those two influences coexisting in the band.

JUSTIN BIEBER ARRESTED

The Miami Police department used Twitter to release what is probably the first of many Bieber mug shots. "@justinbieber #MUGSHOT," @MiamiBeachPD wrote.

There's been a reckoning coming for Justin Bieber for a while now. It may have finally caught up with him.

The pop star was arrested Thursday morning in Miami Beach for driving under the influence and drag racing, according to Detective Vivian Hernandez with the Miami Beach Police — apparently the young pop star failed a field sobriety test after he was pulled over. He was also driving on an expired license and resisted arrest, according to TMZ.

Apparently, Bieber's entourage had blocked off Miami streets with their cars so that Bieber could have the road to himself for a drag strip. "Kid needs help," police spokesman Bobby Hernandez told the Miami New Times.

TMZ says the police report indicates Bieber "reeked" of alcohol, had bloodshot eyes and appeared to be in a "stupor."

Bieber was very belligerent with the police who stopped him, saying, "Why the f— are you doing this?" He also yelled, "What the f— did I do? Why did you stop me?"

When cops patted him down, Bieber reportedly yelled, "I ain't got no f— ing weapons, why do you have to search me? What the f— is this about?"

Welp, glad to see he's growing up well.

Mug shot musings

The Metro staff shares some feelings on the mug shot:

- "This gal will be HBIC at the Miami Women's Penitentiary within 10 minutes."
- "Are those pimples? Somewhere the brand manager from Proactiv is cringing."
- "It's been so long since we've seen him in a shirt."
- "How will his hair hold up in lockup?"

#FREEBIEBER

Beliebers pledge undying support:

- @kidrauhlfckz: if you cover his mouth on that pic you can see the pain in his eye
- @kidrauhlarena: after i saw that pic with his eyes i felt like someone stabbed me right in my heart, i love him too much to see him in pain
- @paulassss I don't believe all of these Justin Bieber rumours...last night he was skating... not drinking, driving or doing drugs!

Shia LaBeouf: Performance artist

In case anyone was curious, Shia LaBeouf's plagiarism drama — and the cavalcade of attempted online apologies that followed — was just "meta-modernist performance art," the actor explained in a pair of lengthy — and quickly deleted — online postings.

"All art is either plagiarism or revolution," he wrote. "My use of Twitter started a broad cultural discussion that needs to be had about plagiarism in the digital age and celebrity/social media absurdity. Intentionally oscillating between hope and doubt, sincerity and irony, knowingness and naivety, construction and deconstruction. I addressed the world." Got it.

Get off that high Schwinn

Re: 'Cyclists are the most selfless humans' (Metro, Jan. 23) The angry, uneducated rant putting entertainingly misguided insults on "selfish people ... too lazy to bike" called to raise the cost of public transport and, in turn, fares for many — some of whom are incapable of riding bikes or commuting many miles in varying weather. Get off that high horse (or Schwinn); after all, you wouldn't have your beloved bikes without our "machines of laziness" to manufacture, deliver, sell and repair them. You, sir, may not be lawless, but you are clueless.

The staff of office

Re: 'Jersey justice' (Metro, Jan. 23) There are staff — and staff. When you manage McDonald's or Dunkin' Donuts, you cannot monitor how every member of your staff is dealing with customers or what he is pouring in a cup. The office of an elected governor is not a store. "Laissez-faire" is a style of leadership; but is it good for someone who want to go to the White House? Do you think that the lieutenant governor is also an uncontrollable member of staff?

Flyers faltering

Defensive lapses costing the Flyers

Sloppy defense has allowed Flyers opponents to create good scoring opportunities on goalies Steve Mason and Ray Emery. These netminders can only do so much.

It cost the squad a point Monday when the Islander came from two goals back in the third to beat them in a shootout, then again against Carolina.

Points they can't afford to give up in the tightly packed Metropolitan and Conference.

With eight more games to play in just 16 days before the Olympic break they know this can't continue.

"We're just not playing our best hockey for the first 10 to 15 minutes and then we turn it up after that," said Wayne Simmonds. "It's biting us in the butt."

"You're not going to be able to do that for the rest of the year. If you get down a couple goals, they're most likely going to shut you down. That's what's happened."

The trick now is making sure it doesn't happen anymore.

Flyers running out of comebacks

NHL. The Flyers can't always rely on third-period heroics to win games.

The formula had been working so well for so long maybe the Flyers simply assumed it was foolproof.

Instead, they were the ones left looking foolish, after a rebound goal by Carolina's Jiri Tlusty with 6:10 remaining gave the Carolina Hurricanes a 3-2 win in Wednesday's rescheduled-by-the- snowstorm game.

Nine times this season — including six in the previous 13 games — the Flyers had rallied from third period deficits to win, matching a franchise high. When Scott Hartnell banged home a rebound on the power play early in the third to knot it 2-2 — after Claude Giroux had cut a 2-0 deficit in half late in the second — they seemed perfectly positioned for No. 10.

"We probably got what we deserved," goalie Steve Mason said of the losing effort. "We're not playing well enough to win hockey games. You can't keep relying on these comebacks to get us out of jams. We have to start playing a better full 60 minutes and right now we're not doing that. We're kind of picking a bad spot of the year to not be playing great hockey."

After winning 10 straight on home ice the Flyers have since gone 1-2-1 here, with the dangerous Bruins and Red Wings next to visit. Much of that has been caused not only by their tendency of digging early holes for themselves, but by their penchant for mishandling the puck in their own zone.

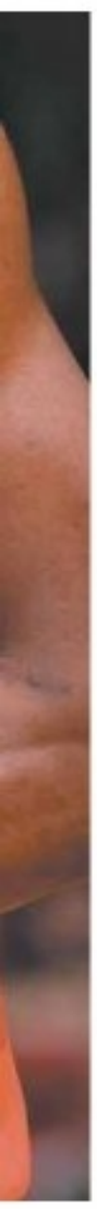
THADDEUS YOUNG

At just 25 years old, the 76ers forward has stepped up as an on-court leader, helping to mentor young Sixers' talent while averaging a career high (17.3 ppg), making an All-Star bid and shrugging off trade rumors.

'THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS'



You've been playing the best basketball of your career. How can you describe the way you've been playing right now?
I'm just playing as aggressive as I can. I try to get up a lot of shots after practice and I'm constantly trying to add new things to my game. I think I've been taking a new approach to the game after each and every game. I'm picking and choosing now the right times and situations to attack my opponents. It's resulted in me scoring in bunches, but I'm also always trying to create havoc on defense.

Two years ago, Andre Iguodala got an All-Star bid and Jrue Holiday got his last year. Do you think you've proved enough to get your shot this year?
I would love it to finally be an All-Star and to be part of All-Star Weekend. That's up to the coaches and the fans to make that pick and if they think I should be part of it then that proves to me how good of a year I've been having. If they don't, then hey, it's not the end of the world. There's always the opportunity to try again next year.

Do you think when coaches look at you this year that they'll see your growth and factor that in when the time comes?
Definitely. I think a lot of coaches see what type of player I am. Not just this year, but years before this. I don't think anybody would not like to have me on their team. I'm a guy that can do a lot of things on the basketball court. I can defend, I can shoot 3s, I can step out and hit the mid-range jumper, I can drive to the basket and beat guys off the dribble; I'm always bringing energy and I'm all over the court. I think that's what coaches are looking for in a player. As a big man, to be as good in transition as I am is also a rare thing.

Are you surprised that your name has been at the center of so many rumors right now?
No. I know I'm the last player standing here. I've been part of the franchise since '07 and it's old news to me. I don't worry about anyone saying this or that. If it happens, it happens; if it doesn't, it doesn't. I just focus on my job — playing basketball the way I know I can play.

You've been teammates with Evan Turner and Spencer Hawes for a while now. Do they get a sense that their time as Sixers is close to the end?
They're taking it the same way I've been taking it. They're not really interested in the rumors or waiting for the trade deadline or anything like that. They're just playing basketball and continuing to make themselves better players. The focus right now is the team and giving it our all on the court every night, and we're going to continue to focus on that.

Q&A

Young looks toward future

If the Sixers get two of the top 10 picks next year and Nerlens Noel comes back fully healthy, would that be enough to make you want to stay in Philly?
All that contract talk is so far down the line that I'm not even thinking about that. ... The draft is in June, Mike [Carter-Williams] is flourishing right now and we have Nerlens coming back very soon. [Nerlens] is a big-time shot blocker and defender, that is something we'll definitely need down the road. I don't know what the future will hold, but I will tell you that I'm here and I want to continue to rebuild and restructure this team.

Moyer might return

Moyer interviews with Phillies

Jamie Moyer could be a dark-horse candidate for the open Phillies broadcasting gig.

"The more I've thought about it and the more time I've spent with the people at Comcast, it's allowed me to reflect a little bit on my childhood and think about all the great broadcasters I grew up listening to," Moyer told the Phillies' website. "To be a part of that rich history would be pretty exciting."

The former Phillies hurler interviewed with the team earlier this week. METRO

Adams speaks

Phillies reliever Adams expects to be healthy

After missing most of the 2013 season due to various injuries, high-priced Phillies reliever Mike Adams believes he is still on target to be ready for spring training.

The right-handed setup man is due $7 million this season and had his 10th surgery in October after strenuous workouts led to a sports hernia. METRO

Browns on to the next.

Pettine named next Cleveland head coach

The Browns and former Eagles president Joe Banner (and current Cleveland CEO) decided to take a chance on 47-year-old Mike Pettine as its 15th head coach Thursday.

Pettine worked most recently as the Buffalo Bills' defensive coordinator and previously spent four years with the Jets under his mentor, Rex Ryan.

The Browns fired former head coach Rob Chudzinski after just one season and a 4-12 record in 2013. Pettine is the Browns' third head coach in three seasons. METRO

The Browns are 23-57 in the last five seasons and haven't finished over .500 since 2007-08 or made the playoffs since 2002-03.

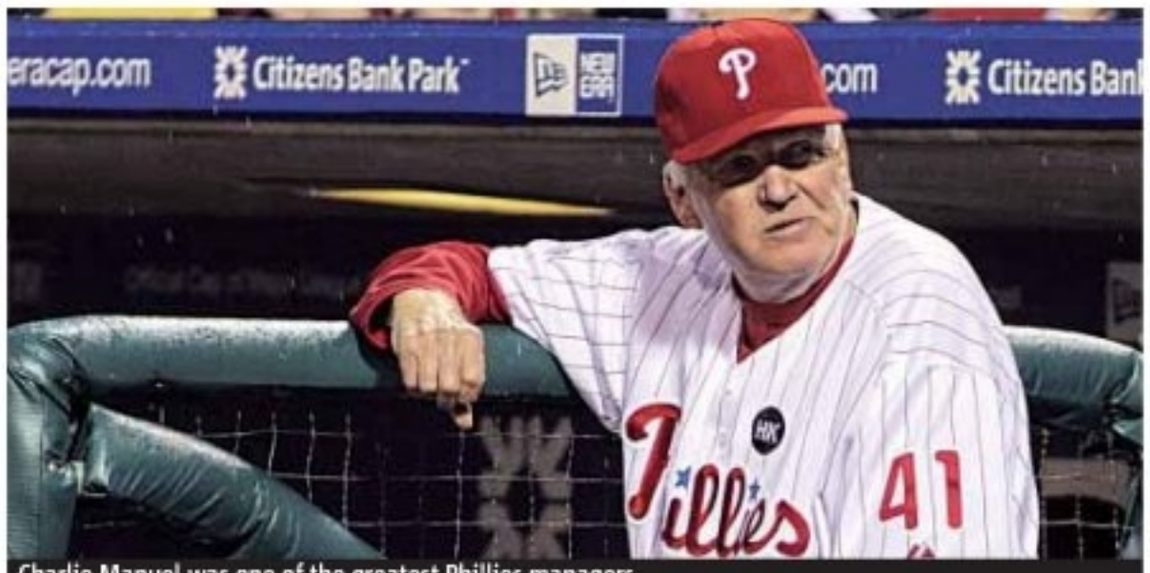
MANUEL BELONGS IN THE BOOTH

When Charlie Manuel was managing the Phillies, he would often talk about how important it was to utilize his players in the right roles. Should the Phillies think that way now since the most successful manager in team history has returned, albeit as an advisor?

It makes sense that Manuel, who knows hitting like Ryan Howard knows the Subway sandwich board, will work with minor league batters and scout at the major and minor league levels.

However, how much would the Phillies television audience appreciate Manuel in the booth?

"Charlie just doesn't know baseball, he's a really smart and funny guy," former Mets manager Jerry Manuel said. "I've known him for years and I really respect him. This is a guy that could do anything in baseball. He can help a guy hit, he can manage and he's someone that is entertaining enough to broadcast a game."



Charlie Manuel was one of the greatest Phillies managers of all time. Can he be a great commentator, too? / GETTY IMAGES

Condran on Manuel

"Those who dismissed Charlie Manuel as a dumb country bumpkin are sadly mistaken. ... The booth would be perfect for Manuel."

On Manuel's reputation for not being the sharpest of managers

Those who dismissed Charlie Manuel as a dumb country bumpkin are sadly mistaken.

"Charlie is like ('70s television detective) Columbo," Jerry Manuel said. "He's one step ahead of everyone and sly as a fox."

That's exactly what would enhance the Phillies broadcast experience. Charlie Manuel, who was always great extemporaneously after games, has tossed some gems at the media.

"That's not old school, that's good school," Manuel said after Utley's aggression on the basepaths won a big game for the Phillies during the '08 stretch run. "That's the way you play the game unless you want to put some rouge and makeup and lipstick on."

The sage pushed his message across while tossing a triple negative. "Chuck is hilarious," former Phillie Vance Worley said. "There's nobody like him. He knows baseball. He cares about baseball and he's incredibly entertaining."

The booth would be perfect for Manuel. But would number 41 accept such a gig?

"I look at my future this way," Manuel said during his final spring training as Phillies manager last February. "What I'll be doing five years from now, I don't know. Who knows? But I'll bet I'll be doing something in baseball. I'll be doing whatever it is they need me to do."
